KeyMacro is a project to implement an automatic software update system. The software is a driver that listens on the socket of a specified port for the message 'key: "update"'. If this message arrives, the driver transfers the software from the internet via FTP, and uninstalls old software. The maintenance information is written into a configuration file, the SoftwareUpdate.cfg. The program uses the Configure Wizard for the configuration, and the user is able to select the desired options in the end. KeyMacro contains a number of useful features, such as:  Multi tasking that uses a special thread for the connecting and updating processes (therefore the program does not block the main thread of the operating system).  Automatic uninstalling of old software (the driver will remove all files of the old software and try to install the new software).  Automatic creation of a SoftwareUpdate.cfg file.  Random file generation (after downloading the software, the driver will create a new file).  The ability to distinguish between active and disabled software (the driver will show only the active versions of the software).  Detailed logs (the driver will output information about each change in the registry and the tasks that are performed when doing so).  The ability to select the progress or progress bar.  The ability to create a schedule that will automatically start the maintenance of the software on a specific day.  The ability to select the frequency of the message to the software update socket (the software updates are sent every 60 minutes, every hour, every day, every month and so on).  The ability to select the folder that should contain the new software package (the default folder is 'C:\Program Files\SoftwareUpdates', but you can change it).  The ability to select the language that should be used when writing the messages.  The ability to select the tool that should be used for the maintenance of the software updates (there are many available tools, like the Windows Update Agent, Synaptics, and a few more).  The ability to select the delay that should be used between each new software update.  The ability to select the base address for the software updates (0 for local downloads, 1 for the base address of the first software package, 2 for the base address of the first software package of the second id6a3396d6

In young dogs, and specifically in puppies, one of the most severe effects of canine distemper virus (CDV) infection is neurological dysfunction. Despite intensive research effort, only little is known about the pathophysiological mechanisms leading to the neurological diseases of CDV-infected dogs. In the present study, we investigated whether the Th1/Th2 bias in immune responses is involved in the pathogenesis of CDV encephalitis in neonatal dogs. Our results show that in dogs suffering from CDV encephalitis, the systemic production of interferon (IFN)-gamma and interleukin (IL)-2 was increased while that of IL-4 remained unchanged. Moreover, we demonstrated that the peripheral production of IFN-gamma is also elevated in dogs that recovered from CDV infection. Furthermore, we found that the IFN-gamma concentration in serum of neonatal puppies suffering from CDV encephalitis was significantly higher compared to that of healthy pups. These findings suggest that in young dogs, the Th1/Th2 bias in immune responses is involved in the pathogenesis of neurological diseases.

Remote Registry Merge (ERM) is a utility that combines the power of the command line with the ease of registry editing in Windows Explorer. Simply drag and drop your files into the interface, ERM will do the rest. Each imported registry file is merged into the main registry of the system it is imported to. All registry merge processes are done in an incremental way. The registry file is parsed for any newer versions of keys, subkeys or values, and if a key/value exists with the same name, the value from the imported file replaces the value from the local registry. After all of the imports have been processed, you can work with the merged local registry file, or continue importing registry files from your original source. With the added incremental file processing ERM allows you to work with only the smallest window of the merged registry file.
