It supports almost all standard Webcams as well as video-cameras (especially webcams) with a resolution of up to 1280x1024. The self-made camera detection is highly customizable and there is a special option for special webcams like the Logitech QuickCam/Pro 4000 or QuickCam Pro 9000 which will also accept contact invitations. The camera detection does not rely on different "capture screens" but on "YUV-to RGB-converter" which is able to detect whether a webcam is RGB- or YUV-capable. In case of a RGB-camera the special "RGB" option will be used. The conversion is set to a standard 1024x768 resolution as well as a maximum 300 frames per second for video. Regarding to the login/registration there are two possibilities: [?] With user-access control. An access-token is generated and saved in the Privat database. This access-token is then used by Privat-Webcam Generation II to identify whether a user is already logged in. [?] Without user-access control. The Privat-database automatically generates a temporary access-token and stores it in a cookie on the visitor's computer. Privat-Webcam Generation II checks this access-token for validity every time a new picture is generated and requires access to the Privat-database. In case of user-access control: [?] Privat-Webcam Generation II is able to save the access-token in the Privat-database. This access-token is then used by Privat-Webcam Generation II to identify the user even after multiple re-logins. The access-token is then stored on the visitor's computer in a cookie. ◆
